BBC report: Water firms illegally spilled sewage on dry days into rivers and the sea

BBC News on 14 June 2024 published a major report on English water companies still discharging untreated sewage into rivers and seas. The following text is taken from BBC:

Every major English water company has reported data suggesting they've discharged raw sewage when the weather is dry - a practice which is potentially illegal.

EWA NEWS present you the BBC report plus background information on the mixed history of waste water (non-) treatment in England and Wales, and on ownership and organisation of water utilities in England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.
